OUT OF THE HEART OF THE AFRICAN JUNGLE COMES A HORRIBLE FORM OF DEATH STRIKING DOWN AMERICA'S LEADERS ACROSS FAR SEAS WITH FANTASTIC ACCURACY. WHAT IS THIS DEATH DEALING MENACE? WHO DIRECTS IT—HOW CAN ITS SOURCE BE FOUND?
EVEN WONDER WOMAN, BEAUTIFUL AS APHRODITE, WISE AS ATHENA, STRONGER THAN HERCULES, AND SWIFTER THAN MERCURY, ENCOUNTERS THE WILDEST ADVENTURE OF HER CAREER WHEN SHE DARES TO SEEK THE "INVISIBLE TERROR!"
HOPEER

WHILE CONFERRING WITH GEN. DARNELL AND DIANA (WONDER WOMAN) PRINCE, GEN. HARDY—C.O. OF THE MARINES—SUFFERS A SUDDEN, STRANGE SEIZURE.
WE KNOW FOREIGN AGENTS—ER—P—PLOTTING—AAAAH—UGHHHHHH!
YE GADS—DI, GET A DOCTOR—QUICK!

THE ARMY WON'T BE CAUGHT SHORT IN AN EMERGENCY THIS TIME - WE - WE - AHH HHH —
GENERAL — WHAT'S WRONG?

OH-HHH

HE JUST HAD A PHYSICAL EXAMINATION — THERE WASN'T A THING WRONG WITH HIM !

DIANA, DARNELL AND STEVE MEET SIMULTANEOUSLY ENTERING INTELLIGENCE HEADQUARTERS.
STEVE, GEN. HARDY JUST DROPPED DEAD AND — BLAZES — WHAT IS THIS — SO DID GEN. POWERS !
2-A

IN GEN. DARNELL'S OFFICE, BEDLAM BREAKS LOOSE.

YE GADS - HE'S DEAD!
THAT SETTLES IT! SOME INVISIBLE WEAPON WAS DIRECTED AT YOU - IT HIT THE LIEUTENANT WHEN HE STEPPED NEAR YOUR CHAIR.

INVISIBLE WEAPON - POPPYCOCK!
MAYBE - BUT IT'S MORE THAN MERE COINCIDENCE THAT SCORES OF HIGH MILITARY OFFICIALS ARE DROPPING DEAD! WE'D BETTER REPORT THIS INCIDENT TO INTELLIGENCE.

AT INTELLIGENCE HEADQUARTERS —
GEN. KEEN - THANK HEAVENS THERE'S ONE GENERAL LEFT!
IF WONDER WOMAN'S THEORY ABOUT SOME INVISIBLE WEAPON IS TRUE, I OWE MY LIFE TO HER!
THAT'S STRANGE - DIANA PRINCE RACED OUT OF HERE TO YOUR OFFICE WITH THE SAME THEORY —

DI WAS AFRAID SHE WOULDN'T GET TO THE GENERAL IN TIME, SO SHE CALLED ME TO HELP HER. I SENT DI TO GET SOME INFORMATION —
4-A

SUDDENLY, ETTA AND THE HOLLIDAY GIRLS BURST INTO THE OFFICE —

"LIKE A FLASH MARYA WAS IN THE WATER, WITH THE SMART ALECK FELLOWS AND US TRYING TO KEEP UP WITH HER —"
5-A

WHEN WE FINALLY REACHED THE ADMIRAL, MARYA HAD DISAPPEARED AND THE ADMIRAL WAS DEAD. THE DOCTORS CLAIM HE HAD A HEART ATTACK!

WHEN WE FIND MARYA, WE'LL FIND THE MEN BEHIND ALL THESE MURDERS AND PERHAPS THE INVISIBLE RAY.
I STILL THINK THE INVISIBLE RAY THEORY IS TOO FANTASTIC!
AS YET, THERE'S NO PROOF THESE DEATHS ARE MURDERS.
H

THE STORY OF ELIZABETH BLACKWELL (1821—1910)

IN A TIME WHEN WOMAN'S VOICE WENT UNHEEDED EXCEPT IN THE KITCHEN--ELIZABETH BLACKWELL STARTLED THE WORLD BY BECOMING THE FIRST WOMAN DOCTOR.

STEEPED IN THE NARROW PREJUDICES OF THE TIMES, PEOPLE CALLED HER "CRAZY"--"DANGEROUS"--"SHAMELESS"--BUT THE IRON-WILLED THOUGH GENTLE YOUNG ENGLISHWOMAN BROKE THROUGH THE BARRIERS OF PREJUDICE TO ATTAIN HER IDEALS!

SHE WON FOR HERSELF AND FOR ALL WOMEN, THE RIGHT TO STUDY WHAT WOMEN HAD FOUND NATURAL SINCE TIME BEGAN--THE GENTLE ART OF HEALING!

WHEN ELIZABETH WAS TWELVE, HER FATHER TOOK HIS FAMILY TO THE U.S., WHERE HE DIED A FEW YEARS LATER, LEAVING ELIZABETH AND HER SISTER EMILY TO SUPPORT THE FAMILY BY TEACHING. BUT AFTER A FEW YEARS--

ELIZABETH RETURNED TO TEACHING FOR THE NEXT TWO YEARS AND SAVED UP TO THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS NEEDED FOR A MEDICAL EDUCATION! THEN SHE TRAVELED TO PHILADELPHIA, THE MEDICAL CENTER OF THE U.S., TO STUDY WITH DR. DICKSON AND DR. ALLEN-

THE LESSON TODAY IS ON THE STRUCTURE OF THE HUMAN WRIST. AS I NAME THE PARTS IN THE SPECIMEN ON THE TABLE, YOU WILL NOTE AND DESCRIBE THEM IN YOUR COPYBOOK--
YES--DOCTOR--

BUT AS ELIZABETH'S HORRIFIED GAZE RESTED ON THE SPECIMEN ON THE TABLE--
YOU LOOK FAINT, MADAM --ER--SHALL THAT BE ENOUGH FOR TODAY?
OH, I--NO--NO, DOCTOR--PLEASE GO ON! I'LL BE ALL RIGHT--

AFTER SEVERAL MONTHS OF STUDY WITH DOCTOR ALLEN--
ELIZABETH, I'M PROUD OF YOU! IF YOU CAN GET INTO A MEDICAL SCHOOL--YOU WILL SURPASS THE MEN!
THANK YOU, DOCTOR.

BUT IN ONE MEDICAL SCHOOL AFTER ANOTHER, HER RECEPTION WAS THE SAME--
NO! THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A WOMAN STUDENT IN OUR SCHOOL--NOR DO I EXPECT THERE EVER WILL BE --YOUR APPLICATION, MADAM, IS DENIED!
DEAN ACHESON

AGAIN--AND AGAIN--AND AGAIN!
NO! NO!
A WOMAN DOCTOR? NEVER!!
MADAM, I AM SHOCKED!

FINALLY--WHEN HOPE HAD ALMOST RUN OUT--
EMILY! HENRY! MARION! EVERYONE COME QUICKLY! I'VE BEEN ACCEPTED--I'M GOING TO STUDY AT GENEVA MEDICAL SCHOOL, IN NEW YORK!

AND AT THE START OF THE NEXT TERM--
HERE SHE COMES!
REMEMBER WHAT WE DECIDED, FELLOWS, WHEN WE VOTED TO LET HER JOIN OUR CLASS--THAT WE'VE ALWAYS GOT TO REMEMBER THERE'S A LADY PRESENT!

IN ORDER TO REALIZE HER DREAM-- A DREAM OF WOMAN, THE HEALER--ELIZABETH BLACKWELL WAGED A LONG, UNYIELDING, BITTER BATTLE!

THANKS TO THE PATH SHE BLAZED, WOMEN TODAY ARE FREE TO STUDY THE GENTLE ART OF HEALING-- AND THE GLOWING RECORD OF THEIR ACHIEVEMENTS MORE THAN JUSTIFIES THE BURNING FAITH THAT THIS WONDER WOMAN OF HISTORY HAD IN HER SEX!

BASEBALL DOUBLE

By JIM ROBINSON

"BUT Doc!" Roy Porter's fever-flushed face turned on the damp pillow, "It's the final game of the series—tied up three games each. I—I just gotta be there in the dugout, Doc!"

Grey-haired Dr. Jetterson's blue eyes were sympathetic. "Mrs. Porter," he said, turning to the bat boy's mother, "your son's fever is still high. He must remain in bed for at least two more days." He paused, frowning. "Or I'll not be responsible for the consequences!"

Roy turned his eyes away, blinking a little, and stared miserably at the wall. The Tigers would be playing their most decisive game of the year in a few hours and he couldn't be present to handle the bats and run the many errands he knew would be needed. Roy sighed with resignation. "Why did that flu bug have to bite me all of a sudden?"

After the Doc had gone, Roy called his mother over to the bedside.

"Doc's the team's medical man, Mom. When he gets over to the clubhouse he'll tell Pops Merril, the manager, how it is with me and Pops doesn't want to be bothered about who to get in my place. Will you call up Cousin Wilbur and ask him to come over here so I can talk with him? I think he could fill in okay. Will ya, Mom?"

"Certainly, Roy. Only your cousin Wilbur isn't any too trustworthy, you know."

"Wilbur won't have time for any of his 'tricks', Mom. He'll do—just for today. He knows what the routine is because he's been in the dugout with me a coupla times. Oh, and Mom . . . please phone Pops," Roy chewed at his lip nervously, "that I'm getting a substitute to take my place."

But Mom Porter knew Wilbur Croats' character better than did her son Roy.

Wilbur had already been up to some of his "tricks" but you would never have known it to see him standing there by Roy's bed and smiling quiet-like and saying: "Yes, Roy. Sure will, Roy—" half the morning.

Wilbur's "tricks" this time were going to run into big money. For him and for the big-time gambler who had hired him for a thousand dollars! One day's work—for a thousand frogskins! And all as a result of Wilbur meeting a guy in a pool room who was the spitting image of his cousin Roy!

Long ago, the crafty Wilbur had set up the deal between him and the gambler . . . and this young fellow "Red" Steers who was the perfect double of Roy Porter the bat boy. Now the golden opportunity had arrived!

Wilbur wanted Roy's job as bat boy for the Tigers. The gambler wanted the series final on ice for the Redlegs. To accomplish this they were going to eliminate the Tigers' best pitcher, Willow Snider, by doping the linament the pitcher used on his arm just before game time. Acid in this linament would burn the pitcher's arm so badly he couldn't possibly pitch and so ruin the Tigers' chances of copping the game.

But Wilbur and his crooked friends failed to reckon on the long arm of coincidence—on just one little detail that was very much overlooked. Sandy Barker, the radio announcer, knew Roy Porter and when he thought he saw him lining up the bats in front of the dugout before game was called, he mentioned it on the air just as part of the general background of the game he was describing.

"The Tigers' bat boy," he chattered into the "mike", "is sure nervous today. I've never seen Roy Porter get so balled-up before. He's giving the players the wrong bats as they warm up. But he'll steady down. He's a good kid."

Roy slammed straight upright in bed and his fever-bright eyes were glued on his clothes hanging there across the room in the open closet.

"So I'm at the ball game and nervous, too, eh?" Roy hurled the light blanket aside. He put his feet on the floor and wobbling a little on his pins, went over to the closet.

He was just about dressed when his mother entered the room. "Why, Roy! You get right back in that bed! You know what the doctor—"

"Sorry, Mom. I'm getting over to the ball park, quick. There's something mighty queer going on there and I figure Wilbur is behind it somewhere—" And he was out of the room now and down the steps still stuffing his shirt-tail into his pants. His shrill whistle stopped a cruising cabbie on the corner. He piled in, sweating hard now and shakier than he ever thought was possible after staying in bed only two days.

"The Stadium, driver. Quickly!" Feverishly he tuned in the cabbie's radio to the series game. Good! It hadn't begun yet! "Faster, driver!" Roy gripped the strap at the side of the cab and tried to figure out who looked enough like him to double as bat boy for the Tigers! And what about cousin Wilbur? He'd take care of both those guys if he ever got there in time.

As Roy wobbled thru the players' gate under the stands, sweat dripped off the end of his nose. Black spots kept jumping before his eyes. The fever was mounting higher from his exertion. Finally he crawled into the dugout. Spike Reams looked at him queerly. "Hey, kid. The series gotcha all right. Y' look sick!"

"I'm sick all right! Where's that bat boy?"

"Where's the bat boy? Are ya kiddin'—hey, what's the matter with—"

But Roy was out of the dugout again, frantically searching with red-rimmed eyes for the bat boy that the radio announced said was Roy Porter!

He grabbed Rollins, the left fielder, by the arm. "Seen my cousin Wilbur?"

"Yeah. He was here about fifteen minutes ago but complained of a cramp in his stomach. When he saw you were back on the job he said he was going to see a doctor."

"Saw me! Going to see a—why that—"

Roy dropped the fielder's elbow, struck off unsteadily for the locker rooms. Out of the corner of his eye he saw the umpire pull out his little whisk broom and start dusting off the plate. The game would start soon now. Roy forced himself into a dog-trot. His head felt like it would snap off his neck at every jounce. It was pure torture to run.

He burst into the locker room and peered about him uncertainly. He could hear the muffled tones of the manager and Willow Snyder talking in the little cubby-hole of an office beyond the center partition. He turned a corner of the aisle and there, crouched before Willow's locker, was—Roy Porter, the bat boy! But it couldn't be—he was Roy Porter!

Then the crouching figure stood up, a curl on his lips. They eyed each other steadily. A natural double if there ever was one, Roy thought. Then with a start, he saw the other draw a large clasp knife and flick a long blade onto the end of it with a push button in the handle.

With a hoarse cry, Roy flung himself at the impostor. He grabbed the other's wrist with both hands and twisted. They both tumbled to the cement floor in a writhing heap.

There was a horrible scream from Roy's double. He let go the knife and rolled to the side, still screaming and clawing with both hands at the back of his pants.

A door banged open and the Tigers' manager and Willow Snider came bounding out into the locker room. Behind them was tall, grey-haired Dr. Jetterson, his eyes blinking in astonishment as he saw two Roy Porters! He stared at one who was fast losing consciousness; at the other, writhing and screeching in the grip of Willow Snider.

"He had a bottle of acid!" gasped the real bat boy. "He was going to put it in Willow's linament. But it broke in his own hip pocket when I knocked—"

"He's lieing!" shouted Roy's double. "He's an impostor! I'm Roy Porter."

Roy just had strength to crook his finger at the tall Doctor who bent down over him. "I can prove who I am, Doc. Lissen . . . remember what you told me this morning? To stay in bed or . . . well, Doc. I broke that bottle of acid in that impostor's hip pocket and I'll not be responsible for the consequences!"

"This boy is the real Roy Porter," cried the Doc and gently picked the bat boy up in his arms. "I'm going to give him a shot of sulpha-drug. I sure want him to see us win this game, eh, Willow?"

"You said it, Doc!" grinned the big pitcher and shook the acid out of that little rat who looked like a bat boy but who wasn't.
