NOTES FOR READING

『 』 - This is to be read as “blank”. While it does give Japanese for reading, it’s put as 『 』 with Furigana telling you how to read it. We chose to just go with just 『 』 because that’s how it is originally.

Blank - The Japanese given for 『 』 is “kuuhaku” which means “blank”. Putting the two main character’s names together, Sora (空) and Shiro (白) makes kuuhaku (空白), which is where the name comes from.

Shiro - Shiro is very soft spoken and when talking trails off, which is why you will see a lot of ellipses when reading her speech.

10^{120} - This is a reference to the “Shannon number”. The Shannon number, named after Claude Shannon, is an estimated lower bound on the game-tree complexity of chess. Shannon calculated it as an aside in his 1950 paper “Programming a Computer for Playing Chess”. This influential paper introduced the field of computer chess.
