A word on Kaido's devil fruit

There is a story known as "The Dragon Gate Legend" in Chinese mythology. The story describes thousands of Koi fish relentlessly swimming upstream the yellow river current. At the end of their journey they encounter a massive waterfall. Most of the Koi give up and let the river's current carry them away. A few persist and carry on trying to reach the top of the waterfall.

After hundreds of years, a single Koi reaches the top.

The gods recognize this Koi for its determination and bestow upon it the gift of transformation into a dragon

Because of its bravery, the Koi is also oftentimes associated with Samurai.

This could be Kaido's Devilfruit - Koi-Koi Fruit.

There were hints throughout the story:

Kaido's tattoo

He also lives on an island atop a gigantic waterfall where the main method to enter, is to be pulled by a gigantic Koi.

All that is to say, when read in Japanese and with some cultural background, it's unsurprising that the Mythical variant of a Fish Fish Fruit could be a dragon!

Nevertheless, please give the story a read for more details!

We also might have a clue now, why he is the strongest in Land, Sea & Air.
