BULLPEN BITS #18

MAN, WOULD YOU LOOK AT THIS GUY? ALL THIS TIME I'VE BEEN MAKING FUN OF THOR'S HAIR AND THE WAY THAT HE TALKS...

...AND HE'S THE ONE SCORING WITH ALL OF THE GIRLS!

Hi, Heroes!

Knowing how eager you are to learn which lucky individuals are favored with No-Prizes this ish, let's not waste another minute as we joyously race to read comicdom's most eagerly awaited and best loved gaggle of light-hearted letters and awesome answers...

Phillip Berrian of Brooklyn, New York sure thinks big. Want proof? Read on ...

"Did you ever think about having your own TV network where you could show old Marvel cartoons and old TV shows like The Incredible Hulk and Spider-Man? It would be so cool if Marvel could someday have its own network!"

Great idea, Phil. The only problem is, do you know how much our own TV network would cost? But here's a way to do it — if you, and all the Marvelites throughout the globe, would buy hundreds of copies of every title we publish for the next few years, we just might be able to afford our own network. Sounds easy, right? Izzit a deal?

While Phil contacts Marvelites world-wide, let's meet Jeff Eser of Ontario, Canada...

"Two questions. Has Spider-Man ever lost his superpowers for a period of time? And, has Aunt May ever fallen in love with anyone since Uncle Ben?"

I can't remember Spidey ever losing his powers, Jeff. (Though, if I'm wrong, we'll get a ton of mail about this one!) As for Aunt May, I seem to remember her once having a crush on Doc Ock and, though I wouldn't want this to get around, I also heard that, when we were both a lot younger, she was rumored to have had a thing for me, too!

Ryan Dew of Garrettsville, OH is one guy who seems to know what he wants...

STAN'S SOAPBOX

"I'm thinking about becoming a comicbook writer like you when I grow up. Do you have any advice?"

Sure, Ryan. Read, read, read! Write, write, write! Read everything and anything you can get your hands on — not just comicbooks. And write whenever you get the chance — write, articles, compositions, essays, stories, anything and everything to give you a facility with words and with putting your thoughts on papers clearly and interestingly.

Once you feel that you can really write, then and only then, concentrate on comics. Study the mags, learn to recognize each writer's individual style, try to figure out what makes some strips better than others and, when you think you're ready, contact the editors at your favorite mags and ask if you can submit samples of your writing. Don't get discouraged if no one seems interested in you at first; remember, there's a lot of competition, but stick to it. All you need is talent and a whole lot of luck!

Wow! I didn't realize I could be so serious for a whole paragraph. I must be slipping! But, to be sure that you don't slip, you'd better commit our address to memory— Soapbox, Marvel, 387 Park Avenue South, New York, NY 100016 --and it won't hurt to memorize our e-mail address, too: stanfanz@aol.com. Or, as the ever delightful Dr. Doom is so fond of saying, "Non sum qualis eram!"

Excelsior!

SPIDER-GIRL

Dear Spider-Girl,
I just wanted
to say:

Yaaaaaaaaahhhhhhooooo!

What a great ride this has been so far.
I can't wait to see how Peter and MJ will die and what other tragic things will happen in May's life.

Silviano Mendo Kievits

The Netherlands

My! My! Aren't we bloodthirsty?

Dear Spider-Girl,

I love to read SPIDER-GIRL. I think that she is the best comic book heroine ever to pop up in comic book history.

There is just one thing that bugs me: the battles are just so, well, wimpy. I mean she does a good job when she fights, but the people she fights are too powerful for her.
She either flees and hides, or needs help from someone else. I must admit though, Killerwatt, The Dragon King, Mr. Nobody and Crazy Eight are very hardcore villains and she sure did kick their butts.

Tina Fisher
werewolfgirl13@yahoo.com

She sure did, Tina! And we're kind of glad her villains are too powerful for her.
Otherwise her stories would be borrrrrrrring!

Dear Marvel,

Since it's been said in SPIDER-GIRL that Peter Parker lost his leg fighting the Green Goblin, I think you should have a major crossover with Peter Parker and Amazing
Spider-Man that actually shows this story.

Alex Goforth
Perry, OK

It's an interesting idea, Alex...but we tend to shy away from major crossovers at MC-2.

Dear Crew,

I heard about the LAST issues of A-NEXT and J2 and I hope that doesn't mean that you will be canceling SPIDER-GIRL. This is the best comic in the Marvel Universe. I tell my friends and relatives about Spider-Girl and the first thing I mention is the style of writing.

"Your name is May 'Mayday' Parker and you are the daughter of the original Spider-Man."
It's a very unique style of writing. My friends and I love it. Darkdevil is a interesting character and I hope to learn more about him in the future.
I wasn't at all surprised to see J.J.J. still running the Daily Bugle but I hope that he doesn't cause trouble for May. When Mr. Walters said that their history with Spider-Man ended tragically, I really

the comparisons between May

I'm happy to see May developing into her own feel is a sizable threat to both May and the creative team. Maybe I missed the answer somewhere, please let me know if I'm wrong.

May is not the science wiz that her father is,

Dear Marvel,

Are the stories in the MC-2 comics taking place in the future of the normal Marvel Universe, or is this supposed to be an alternate universe?

Adrian Parker
address withheld by request

Our stories are just...welllll...stories!
We think they're taking place in a possible/alternate future...but we could be wrong! (It may actually be an impossible/parallel world.)

Dear Femme Arachnis,

Darkdevil! It's all about Darkdevil! What more can be said about this mysterious specter? Well, I think I might have an interesting tidbit. I know who he is! I am 80% sure of his identity! It has to be Nightcrawler! Please, if you will, inspect the evidence:

1. The dull blue tint to his mouth area.
2. The pointed canines.
3. The disappearing (teleportation) act.
4. In the fabulous Spider-Girl #12, he says,
"How did you manage to discharge the rubble at me? Neither I nor your father--". Last time I checked, Nightcrawler can also stick to walls.
5. The costume. It resembles Nightcrawler's at the shoulders.

Although, I HAVE found one thing that contradicts my theory: the hands and feet.
But, I think that he either had an operation/accident or the costume somehow covers them up.

That's all I really have to say other than it's a GREAT comic. Keep it up!!

Mario Calderaro

The_Ek_Skanz@juno.com

Hmmmm...

Dear SPIDER-GIRL people,

I just read Issue # 12, and I'll make this short, sweet and to the point--Darkdevil is a clone of Spider-Man! Yes, and here's my proof...in response to Spider-Girl's new power (forcing the rocks away in a telekinetic way) he said... "Neither your father nor I---" Why else would he think her powers were anything like his? Also, right after that he bounces away (very Spidey-like) and also he knew about her spider sense. Okay, that's about it!

Jason Sarlanis
Dix Hills, NY

Hmmmm...

Dear Webbed Wonders,
I have just finished reading both
